For those who do not know about the Snowshoe Thompson Chapter 1827 of E. Clampus Vitus, they are a nonprofit volunteer service organization that combines a dedication to preserving western heritage and mining history with a never ending quest for fun.

The group, affectionately known as "the Clampers," are the largest volunteer nonprofit historical preservation organization in the country. They install hundreds of historical plaques to commemorate sites, people and events that played a role in our western heritage. Without these markers, many of these historical events might have been lost forever.

The E. Clampus Vitus organization was first formed in 1851 in California.
